

2010 Census Pre-Test Taking Skills Workshop

Durham needs capable census takers who are familiar with African American and immigrant communities. Their knowledge offers the best chance for the 2010 census to achieve a fair and accurate count in neighborhoods that were undercounted in the last census. An accurate count is essential for fair representation and funding for community services.

This test-taking strategy workshop is designed to insure community experts who want to help count their community can pass the test to become a census worker. It is a good job, but competition is stiff. Job offers to qualified candidates are dependent upon several factors: your test score, language skills, and favorable background check, among others.

The workshop will cover:

- A 2010 Census Practice Test for Field Employee Positions with a comprehensive review of questions
- Multiple choice questions techniques
- Process of elimination techniques
- Math computation techniques
- Reading passage techniques

Workshops are scheduled as needed
